case, the court rendered a decision in favor of the defendant.

Ox Case on Trial.

The afternoon session of the court was occupied with the case of Charles E. Skinner of Mansfield against Hyman Chasen of this city, alleging a breach of warranty in the selling of an ox.

Mr. Skinner, the first witness, testified to a conversation held between himself and Chasen last fall about a pair of oxen. Chasen, who then owned the animals and had them in his possession, wanted $610 for them, but this was more than the witness wanted to pay, and it was finally agreed that $100 should be paid for them. At the time of the sale, the witness stated, he noticed one of the oxen looked bloated and he called Chasen's attention to the fact. The latter stated that he had just watered the animals and this was the cause of the seemingly bloated appearance. At this time Chasen said he would guarantee the oxen to be all right.

The oxen were driven to the home of the witness, where they were turned loose in the yard. That night it was noticed that one of the oxen was sick and would not eat. From this time up to the time it was killed the animal could not be used because of its condition. The day after the sale the new owner notified Chasen that the animal was not as it was supposed to be and that he wanted the animal's taken back. Chasen was offered $10 if he would take them back, but this he refused to do.

A number of witnesses were produced by the defendant. Most of these told the same story in regard to the health of the animals before Chasen had purchased them. Chasen told the court that he did not make any guarantee, as he did not know the animals in his possession more than five minutes, but he did admit telling the plaintiff what he knew of them, which was what somebody else had told him. Mrs. Ogochowitz, whose husband owned the oxen before Chasen purchased them, got on the stand and stated that she could not talk the language but she understood it all right. It was impressed upon her that she was doing all right, as she answered the questions as they were asked, but she still held to the belief that she could not speak the language.

Judgment for Plaintiff.

After all the testimony and the attorneys in the case had made their arguments, the judge gave judgment of $40 and costs in favor of the plaintiff. Court was then adjourned for the day.
